

Elections Committee

The Election Committee consists of three people appointed by Council at least 120 days before the voting date. It is responsible for the general direction and overall supervision of an election conducted under the Elections Act, and works closely with other voting officers under the Elections Act.

Some of the Committee's responsibilities include:

- After the results of the elections are declared, the election committee provides a written report to the Council setting out the results of the election and the details of carrying out the election process under its direction and supervision;

More detailed information is available in the Kwanlin Dün Elections Act.